Biographical Sketch:

George E. Post was born in 1838, in New York. He joined the City College of New York where he earned his BA in 1854, his MA in 1857, and his MD in 1860. One year later, he went on to earn his diploma in theology from the Union Theological Seminary of the Presbyterians. In 1863, Dr. Post was sent to Syria, by the "American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions". Stationed in Tripoli, Post started practicing medicine, and took up the study of Arabic. He joined the Syrian Protestant College (SPC) in 1868 as professor of surgery. He played an important role in the foundation of the School of Medicine at the SPC, and would later on become one of the pioneers of anesthesia in the Arab world.

Post was a man of many talents and his skills spread over many different fields, including medicine, botany, theology, and architecture. Not only did he teach and practice surgery, specializing in the treatment of eye cataracts, but he also was a pioneer in medical research, publishing articles in several journals and serving as the editor of two medical journals, namely "أخبار طبية" (Medical News) and "الطبيب" (the Physician). Of all his talents, interests and skills, Botany was his favorite pursuit. As a botanist, he contributed to the study of vegetation in the Middle East publishing two seminal world, namely, the "Flora of the Middle East" [1884] and "Flora of Syria, Palestine and Sinai"[1896] which became a reference in the field.

Post's theological interests culminated with the production of the first Arabic concordance of the Bible. His creative skills and interest in architecture and urban planning drove him to design his own residences in Beirut and Aley, as well as several buildings on the SPC campus, including Post Hall (The Museum Building) and the Old Medical Building. To honor Post's service and dedication to the SPC, the AUB museum building was named after him.

Post was married to Sarah Read and had six children: Arthur, Robert, Alfreda, Bertram Van Dyck, Francis and Wilfred. In 1896, he received an LLD from the University of Aberdeen and the same honorary degree from New York University. The German Government bestowed upon him the decorations of the Red Eagle and Knights of Jerusalem; the Turkish Government gave him the "Order of Othmaniyeh" and he was also honored by the Ducal House of Saxony. He passed away on September 29, 1909.
