Biographical Sketch

Born in 1886, Philip Khuri Hitti got his B.A. from the American University of Beirut in 1908. He taught at AUB before moving to Columbia University where he taught Semitic languages and completed his Ph.D in 1915. The same year, he returned to the American University of Beirut and taught there until 1926 when he was offered a Chair at Princeton University. At Princeton, Hitti occupied the post of Professor of Semitic Literature and Chairman of the Department of Oriental Languages, and was instrumental in developing a pioneer academic program in Middle Eastern and Islamic Studies until he retired in 1954. After retiring, Hitti accepted a position at Harvard. He also taught in the summer schools at several US universities and served as an advisor to the Arab delegation at the San Francisco Conference, 1945, which established the United Nations. He was honored by Princeton University with the LITT.D. in 1966 and by the Lebanese Government with La Medaille D'honneur du Merite Libanais en Vermeil, Officier de L'Order du Cedre in 1946, and by the Order of Merit, First Degree, from the Syrian Government in 1953. Dr. Hitti died in 1978.
